

Media Release

NSION and HENNSOL to empower Australian paramedics in their fight against COVID-19 for free

Brisbane, Australia

Finnish-based organisation NSION Technologies is now offering their NCS3 secure video broadcasting and communication platform for free to all Hospitals, Emergency & Ambulance Services in Australia while the COVID-19 outbreak is active.

Delivered by Brisbane-based technology company HENNSOL, the unique NCS3 platform allows emergency room doctors and specialists to observe and communicate in real-time with paramedics about the condition of arriving patients using video, photos, audio and text.

This revolutionary technology provides an excellent way of supporting paramedical care while also informing emergency room preparation decisions in advance of their arrival.

During this time of increased risks and demand on ambulance services in Australia and the criticality of care & infectious disease control, the NSC3 Platform can make a significant difference:

“The NSC3 platform is being used by the Finnish national hospital system as part of their EMS and now in their fight against COVID-19. NSION and HENNSOL Technologies will onboard the Ambulance Services, with full access to all the services (hosted on the Australian Microsoft Azure cloud environment) at no cost for a three (3) to six (6) month period. Afterwards, they can either remain on the hosted cloud environment or move their new NSC3 platform to their on-premises environment.”

Adriaan Jooste, Managing Director
HENNSOL Technologies

The NSC3 Group Video and Communication Service also features:

- Real-time Location Tracking so that emergency room teams can see exactly where the paramedics and patient are on a map.
- Advanced, speed-tolerant transmission technology that handles changing mobile data rates experienced in the field (including low 3G data speeds).
- Multiple simultaneous video, audio and text feeds (Including Click to Talk and Text Chat).
- Full administrator control over task management, permissions and more.

HENNSOL are currently in discussions with representatives from the healthcare sector across Australia about expediting the free implementation of the NSC3 communication platform.

For media enquiries, contact Adriaan Jooste on +61 414 20 750 or Adriaan@hennsol.com.au